

EPSRC Doctoral Prize Scheme 2022

- call for nominations

PURPOSE

The EPSRC Doctoral Prize scheme is intended to help universities retain and recruit the best PhD students receiving EPSRC support, to increase the impact of their PhD and to improve retention of the very best students in research careers.

Awards can comprise between three and twenty four months salary (at the first point on grade 07S of the University salary scale) and research support costs for an EPSRC-funded student following the submission of their DPhil thesis.

DEADLINES

The deadline for submission of applications is midday on Wednesday 4th May 2022.

ELIGIBILITY

Nominated candidates:

- must be EPSRC funded students (that is, they must have received fees and/or stipend from an EPSRC training grant, such as EPSRC DTP, I-CASE, DTP-CASE, CDT or have been funded on an EPSRC research grant);
- should meet the EPSRC's expectation that they are 'academically in the top 10-15% of their cohort';
- must have either already submitted their DPhil thesis or be reasonably expected to do so in advance of the proposed start date of funding (consideration might also be given to starting the award after the candidate has completed his or her viva).

Departments:

- should ensure that the nominee's project is a viable one, will further the aim of increasing the impact of the student's doctoral research in terms of publications, KT and outreach, and will be helpful in retaining the student in a research career (EPSRC will ask the University to report at the end of the award period on the use of the awards and the outputs obtained, in terms of these objectives);
- should ensure that appropriate support/space etc. is available;
- and that an induction procedure will be followed at the time the awardee commences employment.

Funding may be requested to cover three to twenty four months salary, research support costs and other specific costs, with the majority of awards expected to be of six months duration. Salary will be at Grade 07S.01 with employer costs of pension and National Insurance allowed for. The panel reserves the right to make awards at a lower level and/or for a shorter time period than that applied for.
